EXPLANATORY NOTE

As described in the planning report submitted in the year 2007 to the City Government of Naga by the twenty graduate students of the University of British Columbia (UBC), Vancouver, Canada, under the guidance of UBC Associate Professor Leonor C. Angeles, urban agriculture, which is broadly defined as any form of agriculture taking place in urban and peri-urban areas, is increasingly recognized as a sustainable, holistic, and empowering means for achieving food security and aiding in poverty alleviation.

From the time the aforementioned report was submitted to the City Government and received by our beloved Jesse M. Robredo who was then the Mayor of this City, various initiatives have been started by the City Agriculture Office all aimed at increasing productivity and utilizing available agricultural resources.

Recently, with the passage of Naga City Ordinance No. 2020-046, urban agriculture, particularly household-based gardening, was declared and taken on as a strategy to fight COVID-19 by ensuring access of each household to vegetables that are needed by the human body in boosting the immune system.

On 22 June 2020, in reply to the request of the Sangguniang Panlungsod for information on the steps that the City Agriculture Office (CAgO) has undertaken or plans to undertake in implementation of the mandates for household gardening under the aforementioned Ordinance, the CAgO reported the following:

[Handwritten mark]

- i. Since 2012, the highly urbanized barangays have been included in the urban gardening/agriculture program being implemented by the City through the Queen Program;
- ii. In 2017, the CAgO started the implementation of a BuB funded project called the Integrated Community Food Production (ICFP) which culminated in 2019. One feature of this program was the organization of Barangay Agricultural Technologists from each participating barangay whose main task was to monitor the project's progress and maintain a barangay nursery;
- iii. With the passage of Ordinance No. 220-046, CAgO is now looking at the continuation of the said ICFP and expanding the same in order to have a community nursery not only in each barangay but also in each of the zones in each barangay.

To ensure full implementation of the provisions of Ordinance No. 2020-046 on household gardening, initial discussions with the CAgO revealed that greater coordination with the barangays and allocation of resources are crucial for a stronger implementation of the urban gardening program. Likewise, initial discussion with the personnel in-charge of the Locally Empowered and Resilient Communities (LERC) Program revealed that engaging the beneficiaries thereof would be one effective strategy to achieve the objectives of urban gardening and resources must be allocated in order to mobilize such participation and engagement.

Thus, this Ordinance.
