Naga City Eases Covid Rules

WITH AT LEAST 86 percent of the target population vaccinated (first dose and/or second dose), according to Mayor Nelson Legacion, the City is well on its way to achieving the number of vaccinated individuals required to reach herd immunity. 13th SP: Crafting measures that help, heal and move the city forward

TO PROVIDE A STRONG policy framework for the City Government's efforts to curb the spread of COVID-19 and its variants, the Sangguniang Panlungsod passed a number of ordinances and resolutions to address the livelihood, health, and safety issues that come with the pandemic. This, while also taking care not to neglect the need to strengthen the economy and protect the environment.

In line with this, the council sought to institute measures that safeguard public health, mitigate the pandemic's effects on the local economy and protect vulnerable sectors. Impact on livelihood and small businesses were mitigated with relief aid while interest-free loans were provided so those who found themselves jobless could start a small businesses. The council also instituted other measures to cushion the pandemic's impact on families, particularly on children who had to continue to endure another year without face-to-face classes. On Legislation

The Mayor's Limited Power Over the Sanggunian

Our country is a republic with a presidential form of government wherein power is equally divided among its three branches: executive, legislative, and judicial. The government seeks to act in the best interest of its citizens through this system of check and balance.

One basic corollary in our presidential system of government is the principle of separation of powers wherein legislation belongs to Congress, execution to the Executive, and settlement of legal controversies to the Judiciary.

In the local governance, the same form and inter-relations of the three branches are also found. Each local government unit is headed by either a governor or mayor (city and municipal) representing the executive branch, while the members of the Sanggunian (provincial and city or municipal) comprise the legislative branch.

While there is no ignoring the power wielded by the mayor as the chief executive who occupies the highest elective position in the city or town and having jurisdiction over all national government agencies in the locality, the Sanggunian as a collegial body is also seen as a powerful branch of local governance. The Sanggunian is in charge of making and passing laws and can override the mayor's decision.

But despite being referred to as the local "boss" who supervises and controls the directions and work targets at city hall in the delivery of services that the people need, the mayor has limited power and authority over the nature of work of the Sanggunian. In fact, under the Local Government Code, here are some of the things that the mayor cannot do without having earned the nod or concurring act of the Sanggunian:

- Exercise the power of eminent domain in the absence of an ordinance and without a valid and definite offer previously made to, and accepted by, the owner of the property.
- Enter into contracts without prior authorization by the Sanggunian.
- Authorize a local official to assume the powers, duties and functions of the mayor's office other than the vice-mayor or the highest-ranking Sanggunian member.
- Veto an ordinance or resolution more than once.
- Appoint heads of offices and departments of the city government without the concurrence of the majority of the Sanggunian members.

Further, the mayor's development priorities and thrusts, which are translated into city development plans by the city development council, can only be funded and implemented upon approval of the Sangguniang Panlungsod. jbp ❖

The Sangguniang Panlungsod, in the course of its work as the city's legislative body, conducts hearings on the committee level, as part of a process of crafting a measure, on a proposed ordinance or resolution. Concerned individuals, groups or sectors (or their representatives) are invited to such hearings or meetings. A committee may call for a public hearing if necessary. The committee then submits its report to the council in a regular session for further discussions on its merits (or lack of it). Good Governance Code Sets Touchstones for NGOs/POs

"THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE shall always reign supreme and it is the prime responsibility of any government to ensure that such will is at all times manifested and enforced."

Councilor Miles Raquid-Arroyo, author of Ordinance No. 2021-86 or The Code of Good Governance of Non-Government and People’s Organizations in Naga City recalls the spirit that energizes the Empowerment Ordinance, a trailblazing initiative by the City Government of Naga under the leadership of the late City Mayor Jesse Robredo, who later became Secretary of the Department of Interior and Local Government.

It has been 25 years since the implementation of the Empowerment Ordinance that also created the Naga City People's Council (NCPC) as the main mechanism that allows the citizenry to directly participate in governance. Its owes its success, for the most part, to the existence of vibrant civil society organizations.

To make sure that the principle of good governance continues to permeate the affairs of the local government, it becomes necessary that Non-Government Organizations and People's Organizations that wish to participate in the governance of the city, either through the NCPC or by themselves, do adhere to the principles of good governance. This, briefly, describes the rationale behind the Code of Good Governance as contained in the ordinance's Explanatory Notes.

The measure sets out the principles and indicators of good governance with NGOs and POs in Naga City which shall be the basis in approving/disapproving applications for NGO/PO accreditation.

The core principles are Responsive Governance, Transparent Governance, Participatory Governance, and Accountable Governance.

The Code also enumerates specific indicators of good Organizational Governance which shall be used in determining whether an organization may be accredited or not. This is in addition to any requirements that are sought for by existing ordinances in the city.

The NCPC is tasked with taking the leadership role in ensuring compliance with the provisions of the ordinance and shall submit regular reports on its implementation. The City government may then use these reports as an input in its decisions related to the ordinance.

As stated in the ordinance, organizations that are applying for accreditation shall present themselves for interview/assessment of compliance with the indicators of good organization governance. The NCPC shall submit its comment/recommendation to the Sanggunian in relation to the organization applying for accreditation 30 days before any application is acted on.

The organization's compliance or adherence to the standards set in the code's provisions will be reviewed by the Sanggunian every three (3) years. ❖

Good Governance

The Naga City FOI Ordinance

ALBEUS

IN CASE YOU WERE UNAWARE OF THIS, citizens of Naga may access any public information from the local government, subject to rules outlining relevant procedures and exceptions. This is made possible by Ordinance No. 2021-014, an ordinance that operationalizes the Freedom of Information program in the City Government of Naga, integrates a complaints mechanism unit, and provides guidelines for its implementation. Also known as The Freedom of Information Ordinance, the measure adds weight to Naga City’s claim as a model for Good Governance.

First-term councilor Hon. Jessie R. Albeus, the measure’s author, recalls that the city is a pioneer in creating the Citizen’s Charter as a tool for transparency and accountability. This, along with the city’s partnership with the Naga City People’s Council (NCPC) as a mechanism for participative governance, provides the foundations for legacies that the late Mayor and former Interior and Local Government Secretary Jesse M. Robredo is known for. Ordinance 2021-0014 complies with a joint memorandum circular from the Presidential Communications Office (PCOO) and the Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG) encouraging local government units to enact an ordinance in support of the FOI, a program created through Executive Order No. 2 issued in 2016. It is also consistent with Mission-Vision of the City, for the City Government to be recognized by 2030 as a model of good governance and responsible citizenry.

Highlights:

- The ordinance grants every Filipino resident of Naga City access to information, official records, and documents and papers pertaining to official acts, transactions, or decisions, as well as to government research data used as a basis for policy development.
- All public officials are obliged to file, provide and make available to the public their Statements of Assets Liabilities and Networth (SALN).
- Designates the Office of the City Administrator as FOI Coordinating and integrating Complaints Unit Mechanism in the City of Naga. For the Legislative Branch, the Office of the Vice Mayor shall be the coordinating office.
- Provides procedures for the filing and processing of requests for access to information or to simply gain insight into all or portion of information and records. An illiterate person or person with a disability may avail of his right to information by making an oral request. The public official receiving the request will then reduce it to writing.
- No fees will be charged for filing a request or obtaining information in digital format; fees will be imposed for printing said documents.
- FOI will be denied when the information “falls under any of the exceptions enshrined in the Constitution, existing law, or jurisprudence.” The ordinance also cites the seven-point Inventory of Exceptions outlined in a memorandum issued by the Office of the Executive Secretary. 📄

Telco Ordinance passed for the safety of motorists and the public

AS VARIOUS ROAD PROJECTS are implemented, utility poles that are left standing on parts of the road which used to be road-sides pose hindrances to traffic and may even cause vehicular accidents. In the interest of public safety, the Sanggunian has enacted Ordinance No. 2021-047, which mandates the “relocation of distribution poles and lines of various utilities in Naga City, including the removal of redundant lines.” Ordinance 2021-047, otherwise known as the Telco Ordinance of Naga City, is authored by City Councilor Lito del Rosario and City Youth Councilor Averly Jerry Escoto. The Ordinance creates an Inter-Agency Task Force, headed by the City Engineer, that will coordinate activities toward the relocation of utility poles affected by projects which are being conducted by the national or local government. Under the measure, the task force is charged with formulating guidelines covering the process where poles are to be taken down or toppled due to the inaction of an erring utility company. It shall also extend assistance to a public utility which lacks the manpower or resources needed to pursue relocation and/or relocation of their lines. Among others, the ordinance sets penalties, including the use of appropriate legal recourse, for companies that fail to comply with its provisions. 📄

Naga is Most Competitive Component City Nationwide

NAGA CITY WAS NAMED Most Competitive Component City overall in the 9th Regional Competitiveness Summit of the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) recently. It also bagged high rankings in the so-called four pillars of the competitiveness index: 2nd in Economic Dynamism, 3rd in Government Efficiency, 1st in the Infrastructure and 3rd in Resiliency.

The City achieved this feat despite being hit by a series of typhoons and the onslaught of a global pandemic. Mayor Nelson Legacion attributed the success of the city to the industry and quick action of the current administration in response to various challenges, and to the efforts and contributions of heads of office in the local government, as well as strong support from the citizens of Naga.

The annual ranking of cities and municipalities maps out and tracks local competitiveness in the four pillars of economic development and competitiveness. Naga improved its rankings in all the four pillars from its previous position in the past year.

Naga Strengthens Mental Health Services

In response, Councilor Lito del Rosario and CY Councilor Averly Jerryl A. Escoto, along with co-authors Hon. Sonny Rañola and Kaye Pauline Servidad, drafted the what is now referred to as the Mental Health Ordinance of Naga City, which has been approved by the council and signed by the Mayor. This unit shall provide the following: Out-patient hospital care for patients exhibiting psychiatric or neurological symptoms; Linkage and possible supervision of home care services for those with special needs; Coordination with drug rehabilitation centers; Referral system with other health and social welfare programs, for the prevention of mental illness; Management of those at risk for mental health and psychosocial problems, and mental illness or disability.

The ordinance also seeks to promote mental health awareness among the public, and to correct the stigma and discrimination associated with mental health conditions.

Furthermore, Ordinance No. 2021-028 also mandates the City Government, with technical assistance from the Department of Health (DOH), to provide training for barangay front-line workers and for other stakeholders in mental health facilities, academic institutions and service providers. 🗳️

Rainwater Collection Mandated in Ordinance

HARVESTING RAINWATER can be a viable alternative to relying on household faucets for non-potable uses such as general cleaning, car washing, and laundry. If properly collected and stored in sufficient quantities, water collected from rain can be used in urban gardens, landscapes, for irrigation and other agricultural needs, thus easing the demand on potable water supply.

Ordinance No. 2021-032 mandates the construction of rainwater collection facilities in existing and new city and barangay-owned facilities. The measure aims to promote the utilization of rainwater as a viable alternative source of water supply. It also aims to encourage city residents to actively participate in government programs and undertakings to address environment issues, including preservation of water sources.

Councilor Lito del Rosario and City Youth Councilor Averly Jerryl A. Escoto are authors while Councilor Jose Perez and City Youth Councilor Ezra Baylon are co-authors.

In particular, the ordinance mandates the construction and installation of Rainwater Collection Facilities (RWCFs) in the following city government-owned facilities:

Naga City People's Mall; Naga City Abattoir; Naga city Hospital; Naga City Infirmary Hospital (Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital) Carolina; City Agriculture Office (Pacol annex); City Hall Main Building; Solid Waste Management and Motor Pool Building; City College of Naga annex (Almeda Highway); Barangay Halls and other facilities as may be identified by the Rainwater Management Board.

The Board which shall be headed by the City Mayor, shall among others, develop the corresponding Implementing Rules and Regulations for the residential, institutional, Industrial and Commercial RWCFs within 90 days from the effectivity of the Ordinance. 🗳️

13th SANGGUNIANG PANLUNGSOD

Dynamic Partner for Sustainable Progress

As 2021 closes, the 13th Sangguniang Panlungsod takes stock of the work it has done as it responded to the unique and demanding challenges of serving the constituents of Naga City at a time of a global pandemic.

As the executive branch's partner, the City Council passed resolutions and ordinances backing the city's development thrusts, which included construction of new facilities and buildings such as the New Naga City Hospital, the development of new growth areas and construction of new school buildings and classrooms. On the other hand, the council also worked to strengthen institutions associated with good governance and people participation, well-loved and strongly-held legacies of the late Mayor Jesse Robredo. Recognizing initiatives in the private sector that are exploring opportunities in the digital economy, the council has firmed up measures to encourage their growth. Among others, the council also dealt with environmental issues in the face of the national government's aggressive road network building, the city's water and waste water treatment needs, and the need to preserve Maogmang Lugar's environment amid the damaging effects of climate change.

It also wielded the legislative gavel in wide-ranging areas of concern, including livelihood, public utilities, health, public safety, peace and order, public administration, youth and sports, and many others.

As the branch of government that holds the 'power of the purse' it sought efficient use of resources even as demands of the pandemic continued to require that funds from some areas be realigned for pandemic response.

Vice Mayor Nene de Asis, a veteran in public service, puts it clearly when she says: "Pandemic or not, the interests of the people will always dominate our legislative agenda."

Apart from measures addressing COVID 19, Here are some of the key legislative measures enacted by the 13th Sangguniang Panlungsod (as of November 16, 2021).
